Whitney Speculation—The Public Deposites—The Secretary of the Treasury and the Deposites, and Messrs. Corcoran and Riggs, and their Liberality. I understand that the President some days ago, made a tender of the post of Ambassador to England to Mr. Pickens, of South Carolina, as I informed you it was rumored he would. Mr. Pickens will very probably accept, though I have good reason to believe that if he should by any possible contingency decline the appointment, it would be again offered to Mr. Calhoun, who is certainly the best qualified man for the position.

There is, I believe, a very warlike feeling in the Gabinet. The President and his Cabinet are undoubtedly determined to maintain the high ground they have taken, and which has been hitherto maintained by this country. Mr. Puchanan is said to be framing an elaborate and forcible restatement of the American title, in which the tome of the inaugural will be fully maintained, and below which none for an instant thinks of going. Mr. Bancroit, too, is making every necessary preparation for the most vigorous measures in the Guif of Mexico, where he is concentrating a most formidable naval force, and the administration mean to secure Texas too. They have no idea that Great Britain, through Mexico, or by her diplomacy, is going to prevent the consumation of the great measure of annexation; and Mr. Ashbel Smith may find before his return from England, that he is no longer Secretary of State of the Republic of Texas, nor Mr. Anson Jones its President, and Mexico will discover that lead is heever, (if not so valuable) than gold, and that war is a game at which she will inevitably be beaten, and by which she will probably hasten the annexation of California.

The Modisonian, John Jones redivivus, I perceive on Monday stopped

Continuation of the Trial of Captain Wilkes.

The controversy between the opposing counsel of the instructions to be given to the jury in the ase of Dinsman, Roberts and Baab, marines, vs Wilkes, was continued before the Court to-day. The log-book of the Peacock was introduced as testimony for the defendant, and the First Lieutenant of the ship examined in connection with the memoranda bearing incidentally upon the case beore the Court. After some parleying upon the expediency of closing the case to-day, it was postpon-ed till to-morrow at 10 o'clock, and the Court adjourned.

At the instance of Messrs. May and Bradley, we shall further postpone, for a day or two, our report of the proceedings in Court, those gentlemen having politely offered to furnish us some material papers in the case.

The plaintiffs lay their damages at $5,000. The case involves the charges against Wilkes, of illegal detention, unlawful whipping, and imprisonment of the plaintiffs; and the defendant rests his defeace upon a certain contract with the plaintiffs that they critinue in the service, and that they were subject accordingly to the navy regulations, and hable to punishment for disobedience of orders. Of all of which, we shall, in senson,

A Firm Stand-All Right.

The Administration has taken its position. Every day this week the Cabinet has had a council upon our foreign relations; and they have resolved in the spirit of a unic, and with the unity of one man, to resist to the uttermost the threats of Sir Robert Peel-to treat with proper dignity the imbecility of Mexico, and the puerile weakness and bravado of Brazil. Every dollar of the appropriations by the last Congress are to be put into immediate expendi-ture for preparatory defences by land and sea, and especially upon the latter element. The navy is to be forthwith put into a trim for action at a moment's ture for preparatory defences by land and sea, and especially upon the latter element. The navy is to be forthwith put into a trim for action at a moment's warning—for concentration, for division or confederation, as circumstances may appear to demand. The Secretary of the Navy will shortly, it is expected, make an official tour to the north, of inspection of the Navy and its co-operate defences. Old Hickory has spoken—and he has confirmed the stand resolved upon by the President. Mr. Buchanan is armed cap-a-pie, and ready for the tug of war. He is resolved, as the head of the State Department, that the honor of the nation shall be preserved. The cloud of war grows more palpable; and with another steamer from the island Empire, the summon to arms may be sounded through the land. If it comes—why let it come. We are ready for war; and we foresee in the result of a war with Great Britain, a new order of things—a new supremacy on the seas—a general revolution, which will shake the citadels of monarchy to the ends of the earth. The whole world must be merged finally in the struggle between the United States and Great Britain, if it should come. Will it come? Not yet; but at length it must; we cannot count upon escaping it, sooner or later. Yet we do hope that this revolution, upon the very verge of which we are approaching, will be a revolution of peace, of commerce, of political supremacy, of the freedom of opinion, of free trade, of unrestricted enterprise, radiating from this Union, and eclipsing the system of the British erapire, and finally extinguishing it. A glorious, unparalleled, and most wonderful career has characterized the ascendency of the strong muscular power of the English government. She has passed the meridian of her glory. She must decline—she is declining—she must give way in her turn to her successor. We are approaching the crisis of the struggle—the administration fully estimates the tremendous responsibility of meeting it. At this moment there are only two nations contending for the commerce
